

PLANNING HR FOR BUSINESS SURVIVAL

To survive the recession, many companies need to review the way they conduct business, who their customers are, and what products/services they need to be offering. Part of this process will mean reviewing the level of 'human resource' required within the business.

HR Response has put together an informative workshop to help business owners/managers deal with the HR management issues of today.

By working through a typical business scenario, attendees will get an insight into:

- Defining the business direction
- Analysing the skills of employees
- Re-mapping the staff structure
- Alternatives to redundancies
- Reviewing contracts
